

The New Urban Politics: Changing Cities and Fresh Perspectives
Saturday, September 3, 8:00am – 5:30pm

I. Toward a New Urban Politics (using the recently introduced format of 30-minute paper presentations with a single responder/discussant for each),
8:00 AM

Chairs: Peter Burns, Soka University, and Clarence Stone, George Washington University

1. Vladimir Kogan, Zachary Peskowitz, and Stephane Lavertu, Ohio State University,
“The Consequences of Election Timing”
2. Discussant - Sarah Anzia, UC Berkeley
3. Katherine Levine Einstein (with David Glick and Maxwell Palmer), Boston University,
“How Institutions Enable NIMBYism and Obstruct Development”
4. Discussant - Mirya Holman, Tulane University
5. Michael Fortner, CUNY,
“Voice, Loyalty, and Exit: Towards an Urban Theory of Justice”
6. Discussant - Amy Bridges, UC San Diego

II. Author meets critics, Jessica Trounstein’s Segregation by Design
10:00 AM

Chair: Daniel Hopkins, University of Pennsylvania

1. Author responder - Jessica Trounstein, UC Merced, “Segregation by Design”
2. Commenter - Ryan Enos, Harvard University
3. Commenter - Lester Spence, Johns Hopkins University
4. Commenter - Amy Widestrom, Arcadia University

III. Roundtable: Conflict, Conciliation, and Cities’ Search for Legitimacy
12:00 PM

Chair: Jennifer Hochschild, Harvard University

1. Discussant - Peter Bucchianeri, Harvard University
2. Discussant - Nazita Laje Verdi, UC San Diego
3. Discussant - Jamila Michener, Cornell University
4. Discussant - Domingo Morel, Rutgers University, Newark
5. Discussant - Ravi Perry, Virginia Commonwealth University
6. Discussant - Diane Wong, Cornell University

IV. Spatial Inequality in Metropolitan Areas
2:00 PM

Chair: Luis Fraga, University of Notre Dame

1. Margaret Weir, Brown University, “Can Federal Reform Mitigate Spatial Inequalities?”
2. Clayton Nall and William Marble, Stanford University,
“The Ideological Contradictions of NIMBYism: A Study of Open Housing in Silicon Valley”
3. Discussant - Zachary Taylor, Western University, Canada

V. Town Hall Reflections on the Urban Field: New Directions and Persisting Enduring Issues
4:00 PM

An opening 30-minute paper to set the stage, followed by a 60-minute “town hall” discussion, with a moderator and three initiators to launch reflections.

1. Steve McGovern, Haverford College,
“The Place of Urban Politics within Political Science: Still a Black Hole?”
2. Discussant - Joshua Sapotichne, Michigan State University

Town Hall conversation on mini-conference and future directions for the urban field

Chair: Jered Carr, University of Illinois at Chicago

1. Initiator - Michael Jones-Correa, University of Pennsylvania
2. Initiator - Celeste Lay, Tulane University
3. Initiator - Matthew Thomas, California State University, Chico